Dear Hiring Committee,

I am writing to express my interest in the Software Developer position at LawDepot. With nearly five years of experience designing and developing internal tools within a dynamic manufacturing environment, I am excited by the opportunity to contribute to a growing and impact-driven organization like yours—especially one recognized for its innovation in the legal solutions industry.

In my current role, I've built full-stack tools using Python, SQL Server, and Microsoft Access to solve real operational challenges. I've independently designed, developed, and deployed user-centric applications—including a production scheduling tool using Tkinter, and interactive dashboards with Streamlit. Though I've primarily worked outside of the .NET ecosystem, I am comfortable adapting to new technologies and have dabbled in C#, Blazor, and Git workflows in my personal development projects. My curiosity and aptitude for problem-solving make me confident in learning your tech stack quickly and contributing from day one.

I am particularly drawn to LawDepot's emphasis on continuous learning and collaboration. The opportunity to work in a hybrid environment while contributing to scalable, internal-facing software aligns well with my desire to grow within a professional development team. I'm eager to bring my attention to clean design, functional solutions, and system optimization to a company making legal resources more accessible for millions.

Thank you for considering my application. I welcome the opportunity to further discuss how my experience and mindset can support LawDepot's mission and technical goals.

Sincerely
Avery Briggs
